Just a few weeks ago, The U.S. Steakhouse, off of Sukhumvit Soi 16, fired up the grill to bring Certified U.S. Angus Beef to Bangkok and I am so glad they did!

With restaurants on every corner, there are many places where you can get a steak in Bangkok. There are a few places where you can have a great steak but most of those restaurants quickly become an expensive night out. That has all changed with the recent opening of The U.S. Steakhouse.

The Steakhouse

Owner, Don James is a true blooded American who loves a good steak. After working with the US Embassy as the General Manager of the A.C.S.A. (American Community Support Association) and having a history with restaurant management and many years working in the hospitality industry; he decided it was time to bring the “American Steakhouse” experience to Bangkok. DJ had the idea of having a restaurant, which would bring the best quality beef at the lowest possible price in a classy but relaxed atmosphere. His main desire is for his customers to have a tasty experience but still feel right at home in their shorts and t-shirt if they so desire. He also wanted his customers to feel that this could be a steakhouse that was not uppity and would allow for a family evening out; this is a huge plus for local and expat parents to have a nice meal out and still feel that their children can come enjoy.

The restaurant has a long bar, with an assortment of wines and spirits available for you to enjoy, and seating to fit any size party. The dark wood and rich colors of the maroon couches and chairs make for a warm feel. The staff is very friendly and their English is great! DJ is there all of the time so be sure to have a chat with him. He is so kind and friendly; he makes you feel as if you are a guest in his home and he always has a fun story to share that is sure to provide you with a little entertainment on your night out.

Beef: It's what's for dinner

Being a typical steakhouse and offering the usual fare, The U.S. Steakhouse has some delicious signature dishes. Start your night with a favorite from DJ's past; Portuguese bean soup. In the name you would think this is a Portuguese dish and not an American dish but DJ grew up on this soup from his many years living in Hawaii. The soup is simmered for four hours and made of bacon, celery, carrots, beans, ham hock and so much more. I found the soup to be hearty and filling with rich flavors; definitely a soup I would want to eat on a nice cool Bangkok winter day. They also have a New England clam chowder on the menu; which is full of potatoes, bacon and clams. It wouldn't be a steakhouse without a Caesar salad and the one here is perfectly tossed and loaded with bacon.

Now onto the main event; The U.S. Steakhouse specializes in three main cuts of U.S. Certified Angus Beef and all are priced under 1120 baht: the New York Strip, the Rib Eye and the Filet Mignon. Although the quality of the steak is superb it really takes a chef who knows his way around the grill which will determine how your dining experience will go. The U.S. Steakhouse is so lucky to have Chef Nick as the mastermind behind the grill. He has been grilling steaks for over twelve years and it shows. I have never had such a perfect cook on my steak before, he makes it seem so easy but I can imagine this is a technique he has come to master over the years.

I can tell you the filet mignon and the rib eye steaks were out of this world but the sides are what really sent the experience over the edge. You have many options for your potato side but I would recommend the loaded potato or the potato au gratin; both are delicious in their own way. You can also choose from a selection of vegetables; the grilled onions to put with the filet is to die for and the creamed spinach with a melted layer of mozzarella cheese on top was heavenly.

Bottom Line

If you are on the lookout for a good quality, not chewy, perfectly cooked slab of beef and a side of hearty potatoes; you don't have to look further than Soi 16. The best part is how affordable your night out will be for the quality of product you receive. In addition to the steaks, you will also find imported fish, pork, and sweet American desserts on the menu. Stop in for lunch to enjoy one of their five different cheese burgers, all made with USDA Choice top ground sirloin, and hand cut fries.

The U.S. Steakhouse is open Tuesday through Sunday for lunch and dinner from 11:30am until 10pm. Happy hour is from 4pm until 7pm with discounts on bottled beer, house wines, and selected cocktail. They are located on Soi 16, directly across the street from Kuppa, and have free parking for their customers at the Somerset Serviced Apartments.
